

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

An enthusiastic and inspiring CEO is required to lead Tasmania's peak body representing volunteering interests, organisations and volunteers.

Volunteering Tasmania's mission is to promote and advance volunteering as a valued social, cultural and economic contribution to the community.

The CEO's role requires strong leadership in promoting volunteering to business, government and the broader community. The CEO will provide excellent management and leadership skills in setting the organisation's strategic direction, management of financial and human resources, achieving key operational objectives and delivering high quality and innovative volunteer programs and initiatives.

The successful applicant will be an outstanding leader who has demonstrated the capacity to build sustainable partnerships and secure ongoing funding from a range of sources, including government and the private sector. It is also expected that the successful applicant will have highly developed skills in communication, public speaking, media relations, networking and relationship building.
